Dear Mr Polman

Unilever sells its products to 160 million people every day. Meanwhile, 2.6 billion people lack basic sanitation, and 1.1 billion have inadequate access to water, according to the World Health Organisation.

Can Unilever bring sunlight into these people's lives as William Lever did for his workers when he built Port Sunlight?

Please help us clean up the global tax system and wipe away tax secrecy. Greater tax transparency would enable developing countries to provide healthcare, sanitation and other services to their poorest citizens.

Please support a new international accounting standard requiring companies to declare their profits made and taxes paid in every country where they operate.

Ask your auditor to back this and the International Accounting Standards Board to introduce it.

Thank you.

Yours sincerely,
